PREFACE

The repetition of the Name of God-Man and the praise of His Attributes has always been known to be the most interesting and beautiful path to the door of the Beloved.

But as just speaking the Name and Attributes tends to become a bit dry and monotonous at the beginning - that is until the Name and Attributes begin to shine with the light inherent in them - it has been found better to sing them to simple tunes which give buoyancy to the words without distracting the lover from his concentration on the Beloved. Naturally such repetitions and praises are better, more effective, in one's mother tongue, for only that goes to the depth of one's heart.

"A Singing" has been designed for use on one's own or for group singing.

I have not added harmonies because that would have increased the pages and added to the cost and would be of no use to one singing on his own, while in any group there is someone who can supply basic chords. Musicians should feel free to improvise as they wish or even re-set the words to their own music.

In a few places where the tune exceeds a comfortable range for the average voice, I have added alternative octaves in small notes.

No tempo directions have been given. The best tempo will be that which neither drags nor is too fast for the words to be clearly heard and felt. But it will be better to be too lively than too solemn.

E

E-TER-NAL AN-CIENT ONE, SOLE CRE-A-TOR ONE, IN WHOSE

LIKE-NESS WE ARE MADE - FIN-ISH-ER OF WHAT YOU HAVE BE-GUN.

AH....

(E)

SPEAK:

Our song is no more, Beloved, than the sighing of a breeze in your praise;
We do not implore great boons or small benefits to fatten our days.

Sufficient for the day are all those errors and shortcomings which to the day belong;
Sufficient for the night is when you, Beloved, are entertained by our simple song.

You have come all the way from your Beyond-state to call your inspiring Call:

"The lover exists only in the Beloved, the Beloved is All-in-all."

Each one's song is sufficient in itself - whether or not by others it is heard.

All songs are but reflections of one Song, Beloved: and that is your singing Word.

Every heart reflects the divine Beloved; the lover is he

Who would shatter his heart-mirror and set the Beloved free.

Each cell of our blood sings your Song- the pity is, each is double-tongued and two-faced!

Each soul is a ray of your Sun; it is by, and before, himself that each is disgraced.

Millions of times, Beloved, you have come to us and sung your Original Song:

"The Beloved is All-in-all: to Him alone does the Earth and you, belong."

E-TER-NAL AN-CIENT ONE, HE FROM WHOSE BREATH WAS SPUN UN-I-

-VER-SSES AND OUR EARTH - FIN-ISH-ER OF WHAT YOU HAVE BE-GUN.

AH....

(5. 20)

SPEAK:

Though we were to sing from now until time's end, we would be no more
Than a band of minstrels playing a one-night stand before your door.

Yet our song is more pleasing to you than the chorale of the stars:
Their song is free, ours must be within the limitations of bars.

The stars are the bees of Creation surrounding Earth their queen;
Their song praises Earth; ours, poured at your feet, makes love's desert green.

Bondage is a girdle to keep spirit's figure pleasingly slim.
When it can pass through a needle's eye it is in spiritual trim.

How serene are the stars! how disturbed is man! But man's disturbance
Pleases the Beloved for it shows he has lost self-assurance.

Self and love cannot exist at the same time in the same place.
Self seeks self's pleasure; love longs for sight for the Beloved's face.

Do not seek knowledge from the stars; their glory is less than Earth's clay.
And the men of the stars are countless lives from where we stand today.

E-TER-NAL AN-CIENT ONE, SUN BE-HIND THE SUN, LIGHT-ING

ALL OUR DAYS AND WAYS - FIN-ISH-ER OF WHAT YOU HAVE BE-GUN.

AH....

(E. 3a)

SPEAK:

We set out in the long-ago, in the dawn of Creation.

We set out singing in a sort of a nude jubilation.

We had every reason to rejoice, for we had just left your presence.

Ah, Beloved, we had no idea there'd be a billion years absence.

A conducted tour of Space with the stars as our guides, we thought.

O God, no excursion ticket was ever so dearly bought.

Presently, Earth loomed before us with a notice board: YOUR TRIP ENDS HERE.

And the angel part of us fled, and the man part stayed rooted in fear.

But we knew that we would have to take up the load of birth;

We were children no longer, but men to inhabit Earth.

And soon (it now seems) you, Beloved, came swinging down the road calling your bright Call:
"The Lover is only his own imagination; the Beloved is All-in-all."

Once we were children singing anthems and praises before the throne of the Lord;
Now we are the Love Street singers filling in time, awaiting your lovely Word.

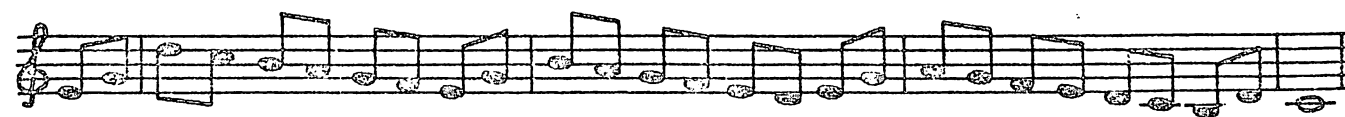

E4

E-TER-NAL AN-CIENT ONE, WORD BY WHOM IS DONE ALL WHICH

HAS BEEN AND WILL BE - FIN-ISH-ER OF WHAT YOU HAVE BE-GUN.

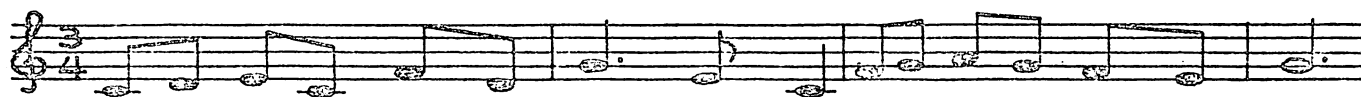

AH....

REPEAT A

HE EN-WRAPS YOU AND PRO-TECTS YOU ON YOUR JOUR-NEY TO YOUR-SELF.

LOVE YOUR OWN DEAR LOV-ING SELF FOR HE IS WHOLE GOD
